

The invention relates to the medical equipment, in particular to the devices for backbone traction and the correction of the bearing in the children. The device contains the fixation appliance with the thoracic and hip elements and loading appliance.