

The invention relates to oil and gas producing industry and is intended for excitation of production wells. The method includes opening of productive bed with well and ignition in liquid in well at level of productive interval of charges of explosive substances in ultra-short delay range.