

The invention relates to communication engineering and is intended to provide high level of security of the central office equipment for MT 20/25-type electronic exchanges from overvoltage (lightning discharges, static electricity, electrical supply network voltage of 220 V).

The device comprises a hollow plastic holder with two basic flat spring contacts fixed inside of the holder by means of solder bending terminals introduced into hole holders and mounted between aerial fuse contacts.