

The invention relates to area of industrial and municipal toxicology and can be used for preliminary estimation of toxicity of new synthesized high-molecular organic compounds in general system of sanitary-hygienic studies. The method is in fact that one determines mass part of propylene oxide, mass part of ethylene oxide, temperature of ignition