

Method of obtaining complex therapeutic remedy from marine organisms for repairing membranes of functionally different human cells comprises grinding of the raw material, ethanol extraction, and cold settling of the extract obtained till the complete sedimentation of the proteins. Then the extract is purified by activated coal and upon filtration vitamin E is added. The mixture is concentrated by evaporation in vacuum. Ethanol is additionally acidified with acetic acid.