

A code lock contains located in a housing girth and blocking pins installed in the housing with possibility of blocking displacement of the girth. In the housing a rod is installed, which is equipped on one side with a head, and on the other side – with an eccentric tail element conjugated with the girth.