

The invention relates to construction and can be used to make the piles. A method includes dipping under action of external load into soil of a vertical hollow element with expanded part at the lower end with an opening bottom.