

The disclosed invention relates to control devices in particular to electric devices for pneumohydraulic drive control of the gas valve.

The device contains the first control unit, the normally closed contact of the first end switch, the first drive of the locking unit, the first terminal being connected with the first terminal of the first control unit.