

The invention relates to milk industry and can be used for determination of fat content in cream in process of production or in separate sample. The method prescribes measurement of electric parameters of cream in sample tested. As electric parameter one measures electric conductivity.