

The method of the fastening of an elongated item makes use of a hold-down strip made in such a way that allows reducing its length in a wrapped state under compression around the item ensuring the strip contraction around this item and its grip.