

Invention relates to the vibration techniques and can be used in technology of building, metallurgy and machine building.

Device contains an operating unit located on the fixed basis, which contacts with the latter thanks to the elastic supporting elements and which is connected to the vibration exciters, which have variable hardness.