

The invention relates to medicine, namely to vascular surgery and transplantation and can be used for providing the vascular access for the chronic hemodialysis in the patients with the chronic renal failure. A method comprises the separation of the radial artery and the subcutaneous antebrachial vein, and their bypassing.