

The invention relates to medicine, in particular to the oncology and can be used in the reconstructive surgery of the pharynx. A method is realized by the resection of the laryngopharynx fragment and the circulation of the esophageal orifice followed by the closure of the defect.