

The invention relates to the methods and devices for liquid treatment, in particular, water, which change its physical and chemical properties, it may be used in medicine, engineering, metallurgy, building, agriculture and life for changing of physical and chemical properties of substances which were treated with this liquid.

The process comprises free-flow passing of liquid through the tube, turbulence at the angle of 60° torsion, mixture and excitation by tube wall friction.