

The invention relates to the biotechnology and may be used in pharmacology and medical practice for treatment of inflammatory processes of different etiology. The method for producing of anti-inflammatory drug consists in preliminary treatment of biological raw material, its extracting in physiologic solution, selection of extract. The cattle child's placenta of the gestation's first half is used as biological raw material.