

The embryonic cell suspensions prepared from the separate embryonic organs are proposed as the basis for the preparations designed for treating functional, inflammatory diseases and/or cancer of small intestine or colon. The native or cryopreserved cells are used which are assayed for the viability and the biological safety.