

A grain harvester has a device for separating foreign bodies consisting of at least one active transporting element, which is operating as the matter of fact across the direction of movement, arranged in an indent open to a slot between an inclined conveyer and the body of a threshing apparatus with at least one output opening for foreign bodies.