

A pot for cooking includes a frame, a lid with an airing, handles joined to them and a plate on concavities below of the frame. For equalizing the temperature field and eliminating the moisture appearance on the inner area of the pot, in the brim section of the airing on perimeter in the side frame two apertures are made lower of the upper frill's brim assembled by its lower brim with the internal brim's surface, and from above to the lid a cover with its central opening near its handle is fitted.