

An installation for gas condensate stabilization contains a cavitation reactor. The new feature is that at the reactor input a pump is installed, and at the output there is a vessel for a stable condensate and for the degassing gas and for separation an unstable condensate into a liquid state of a stable condensate, and the gas formation of propane-butane.