

The invention relates to the industries referred to mining, transportation, processing and use of low-melting materials which under atmosphere temperatures are solid or have high viscosity. A submersible electric heater contains a blade mixing unit made in the form of a solid hollow cylinder with blades at external side surface installed in bearings and a heater located inside the cylinder.