

The invention relates to speech signal analysis for the purpose of speaker identification and can be used in forensic examinations of audio materials.

The method of person identification according to oral broadcasting is based on comparison from a given speech signal of complex parameters. The Euclidean distance with regard to the adjusted parameters with the help of F-ratio is used when compared.