

The invention relates to radio engineering. The method consists in creating a necessary number of bidirectional communication channels in the limited frequency band with increased structured security and increased rate of information transmission for bit transfer rate, and also for analogue information with minimal netting arrival time.