

The invention relates to the medicine, in particular to the orthopedic dentistry and may be used for manufacture of the denture. The combined dental crown contains the metallic framework covered by the lining layer. The crown is limited to the equator of the tooth from the vestibular and the oral surface while the edges of the crown from the approximate surface are located at the specified level depending on the boundaries of the practically healthy tissues of the tooth.