

The invention relates to the area of measurement of electromagnetic radiation of biological objects within range of superhigh frequency (SHF). It can be used for registration of own radiation of biological objects and for registration of dependence of intensity of own radiation on internal and external factors, level of external radiation of those objects by noise signal in SHF range, and for evaluation of absorption and reflection ability of biological objects depending on intensity of external radiation.