

The invention relates to the technology of crushing solids and can be used, for example, in ore crushing mills. A rattler contains a rotary housing and a lining made of a set of uniform plates made of elastic material installed with tightness on internal surface of the housing in its longitudinal direction with formation of undulatory working surface.