

The invention relates to the medical devices, namely to the tooth-brushes intended for cleaning the teeth and massaging the soft tissues of the oral cavity. The tooth-brush for massaging the oral cavity contains the handle and the operating head with the bristles in upper and lower surfaces. The upper surface is designed as the whole convex oval surface with the horizontal and vertical projections. Between upper and lower surfaces, the transitional surface with the projections is generated.