

The invention relates to area of packing materials intended for packing of food products. Multi-layer packing material includes layers of aluminum foil and paper, additionally it includes layer of film made of polypropylene placed over the foil. All the layers in the sequence pointed out are connected to each other by binding substance.