

The end gasket has a support ring installed in the body, pressing unit and support ring placed on the shaft. The pressing unit is arranged as circular permanent magnets, at least one of those is placed in the inner wall of the body adjoining the support ring, and the other one – at the end of the support ring, this end is opposite to its working end; at that the magnets of the support ring and the body are turned to each other with same poles.