

The invention relates to the fat-and-oil industry and can be applied for oil purification.

The invention is based on a problem of improving the method, where by means of additional treatment of oil by new reagent before distillatory elimination of fatty acids and odorization substances and realization of the process of distillatory elimination under new conditions the improvement of quality of purified oil and increasing of fatty acids yield in a form of market product are provided.