

The invention relates to the novel bioorganic chemical substances. The inventive concept consists in developing the immunostimulating drug based on the novel chemical substances with the improved pharmacological properties. The technological process provides for the increasing yield of the end-product.