

The invention relates to production of food goods, namely to producing ice-cream of various kinds. An object of the invention is to improve the known methods and to find a method which allows to produce ice-cream in the form of two-layer briquettes various by composition, or by color, or by composition and color, that significantly improves taste, nutritive properties thereof.