

The invention relates to means for emergency evacuation of people from structures at emergency situation or fire through window openings from any store and can be used in high-rise public buildings, for instance in hotels. A ladder with flexible long elements has at ends of flexible elements means for detachable fixing to stationary structure of building.