

The invention relates to wind-power engineering. The windmill has vertical shaft or rotor to which radial flaps are attached, those are provided with supports, and blades, those are hinged to flaps with possibility of rotation with respect to the flaps and cyclic interaction with supports. The flaps of the blades are deflected by acute angle down from horizontal plane.