

The invention relates to the medicine, in particular to the vertebrology and cardiology, namely to the method for treating the vertebrogenic pain syndromes. The method comprises the clinical examination of the patients followed by the acupuncture and the manual therapy. In addition the arterial blood pressure is also measured. The increase in the blood pressure level is corrected employing the hypotensive drugs. Concurrently the acupuncture and the manual therapy continue.