

A method for assembling a piston machine with a mechanism having no connecting rod includes installation of cylinders in the housing of the machine, with assembling and installation in the housing of the machine of a mechanism for transformation of reciprocal motion of piston nodes to rotary motion of the output shaft, at that, each cylinder is installed in the housing of the machine with possibility of displacement in the plane normal to the axis of the cylinder.