

A process for producing an intravenously-administrable gamma globulin solution substantially free of contaminating viruses by heat treating for viral inactivation and fractionating an impure gamma globulin solution and then treating the purified gamma globulin with a solvent-detergent for further viral inactivation.