

The proposed immersed probe is designed for measuring parameters of liquid, specifically molten metal, and contains a tubular casing with a measuring head. Onto the measuring head, transducers of parameters to be measured are arranged. For connection of the measuring head transducers with external equipment, a cable is used that is wound as a spiral and passes inside of the tubular casing.