

The invention relates to the solubilization of lipophilic substances, preferably from the group of lipids, steroids, terpenes, and polar lipids, by means of a lecithin/polyol matrix or a lecithin/carbohydrate matrix so as to obtain water-soluble, emulsive, transparent concentrates which are used in cosmetic, dietary, and pharmaceutical products.