

Disclosed is a grain huller for corn ears containing a handle, a housing and two grates made stamped with bent triangular tangs forming working tools of the huller with passage openings of different size. The tangs are stamped of a thin metal sheet and are located by their base continuously in a circle on the housing and are bent by tips to the opening axis at an angle from 25 to 45 degrees.