

A cathode block for an aluminum electrolytic cell comprises a primary layer and a cover layer arranged thereon, the primary layer containing graphite and the cover layer being composed of a carbon composite material which contains 15 to less than 50 % by weight of a hard material having a melting point of at least 1000 °C.