

The invention relates to the fermenter for batch culture of microorganisms. The fermenter consists of two chambers connected at the bottom with the flexible pipe and the unit for supplying and filtering the air through the necks of the chambers. The fermenter also contains the mechanism for vertical movement of the chambers. Both chambers are cylindrical and equipped with sound emitters with controlled direction of the emission relative to the center of the lower frame.