

The invention relates to food industry, in particular to a process for the preparation of starch-containing raw material for attenuation which involves raw material comminuting, mixing with water, heating, mixture treatment by discrete-pulsed energy injection, addition of α -amylase enzyme preparation, further treatment, and addition of glucoamylase enzyme preparation, holding for 10-15 min. and cooling.