

The invention relates to a pharmaceutical composition with improved stability for topical, particularly nasal, preferably intranasal application, to the use thereof, mid to an application device containing said pharmaceutical composition.