

A clamp is embodied in the form of a metal strip provided with bent edges on both sides thereof. Said strip has a L-shaped recess which forms an elastic tab and is embodied along the fold line of one of the edges in such a way that the bent edge can be held in a setting position, said edge being bent towards the center of the strip on the one side thereof.