

The proposed backed up computing device for performing operations by residue arithmetic is distinctive by its enhanced speed of operation in processing data due to the exclusion of the unit for controlling computing operations. The control signals are generated directly by OR and AND logic elements that are design elements of the device.