

Method for re-cultivation of salted soils with high content of organic substances through washing salts with washing water, at low temperature and with simultaneous application of layer of mineral mass to surface.