

An elastic sieve of screen contains parallel tapes, which are connected by cross connections with formation of the openings between them. The sections of tapes in the openings between cross connections have protrusions, which are turned to the side of adjacent tape in the openings.