

The proposed method for determining the density of soil in field conditions implies drilling an investigation well, selecting the soil samples, and weighing the samples. For drilling the well, core flush drilling and drilling with dry running are used. The soil from the core is removed by a mechanical eliminator.