

The proposed device for measuring the radio-interference suppression factor in receiving radar signals contains a switching unit, a detector, an integrator, a display unit, and additionally, for the purpose to increase the measurement accuracy, two units for sampling signals and storing the signal samples, a unit for determining the ratio between signal amplitudes, and a control unit.