

A method for protection against microbiological processes in the sugar production involves antiseptic treatment of sugar raw material. The preparation, which contains polyhexamethylene guanidine and alkylbenzyltrimethyl ammonium chloride, is used as antiseptic.